Some Artists of Woodland

Woodland is the final resting place of a wide variety of artists. Click each name below to see more of their work.

LeRoy D. Sauer

(1894 - 1959)

A Dayton native, LeRoy Sauer was a nationally acclaimed printmaker best known for his black & white scenes of rural American life. Surprisingly, LeRoy didn't take any art classes during high school—he just wasn't interested. A year after graduating, Sauer began studying art at the Cleveland School of Art. Then came World War I, during which time LeRoy served in the United States Army.

Finding himself in France at the war's end, LeRoy Sauer was one of only 150 Americans selected to attend the American Training Center in Paris. In 1919, following his four-month term of study in Paris, LeRoy returned to Dayton and took up etching & wood block printing as a hobby.

Alice Pike Barney

(1857 - 1931)

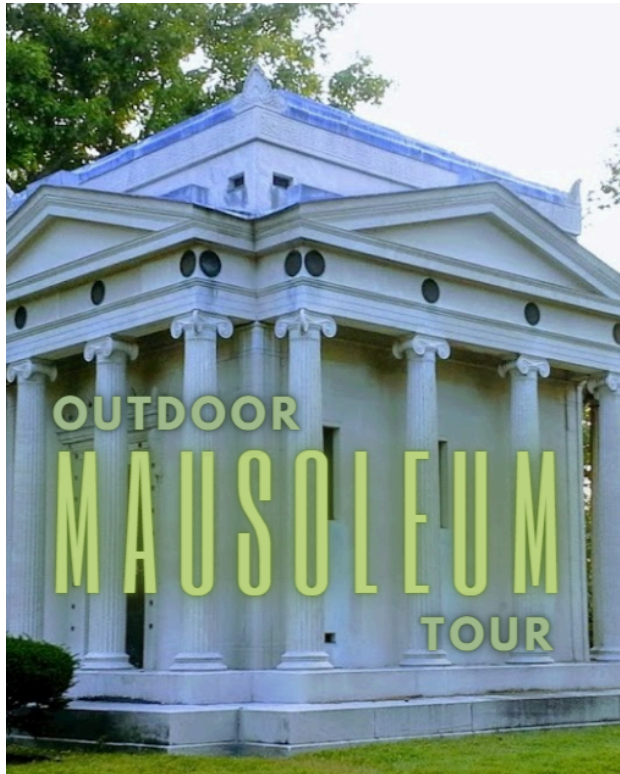

Alice Pike Barney began seriously painting during a trip to Paris in 1883, studying with Charles Émile Auguste Carolus-Duran, a master portrait painter. She continued painting on her return to the United States, winning accolades and a congressional commission that shocked Washington society, who found it unseemly that a woman of Alice's wealth and social standing would paint at all.

Undeterred, she would continue to pursue the arts for the rest of her life. After the death of her first husband and during her subsequent marriage to Christian Hemmick, a man thirty years her junior, Alice devoted herself to converting Washington, D.C., from a cultural backwater to a true global capital of the arts.

Alice Pike Barney is buried in section 102, lot 2251 at Woodland Cemetery.
